

Follow-up of markedly elevated serum potassium results in the ambulatory setting: implications for patient safety.

March 29, 2006

Moore CR; Lin JJ; O'Connor N; Halm EA.

<https://psnet.ahrq.gov/issue/follow-markedly-elevated-serum-potassium-results-ambulatory-setting-implications-patient>

The investigators reviewed medical records to analyze follow-up procedures for episodes of hyperkalemia and found that 25% of patients did not receive timely follow-up.