

A randomized clinical trial to compare the use of safety net enclosures with standard restraints in agitated hospitalized patients.

January 9, 2008

Nawaz H, Abbas A, Sarfraz A, et al. A randomized clinical trial to compare the use of safety net enclosures with standard restraints in agitated hospitalized patients. J Hosp Med. 2007;2(6):385-393.

doi:10.1002/jhm.273.

<https://psnet.ahrq.gov/issue/randomized-clinical-trial-compare-use-safety-net-enclosures-standard-restraints-agitated>

Using physical restraints is a common method to prevent injury in agitated hospitalized patients, but it also can lead to undesired outcomes. This study showed that the SOMA Safe Enclosure™ appears to be a safe, effective type of restraint that is more acceptable to family members and physicians than the types of restraints currently in use.