

Using evidence, rigorous measurement, and collaboration to eliminate central catheter-associated bloodstream infections.

August 25, 2010

Sawyer M, Weeks K, Goeschel CA, et al. Using evidence, rigorous measurement, and collaboration to eliminate central catheter-associated bloodstream infections. Crit Care Med. 2010;38.

doi:10.1097/ccm.0b013e3181e6a165.

<https://psnet.ahrq.gov/issue/using-evidence-rigorous-measurement-and-collaboration-eliminate-central-catheter-associated>

This program report highlights the implementation processes of the AHRQ-funded CUSP initiative that builds on the successful Keystone program in Michigan to reduce central line infections.