

Physicians' responses to clinical decision support on an intensive care unit—comparison of four different alerting methods.

September 1, 2016

Scheepers-Hoeks A-MJ, Grouls RJ, Neef C, et al. Physicians' responses to clinical decision support on an intensive care unit—comparison of four different alerting methods. Artif Intell Med. 2013;59(1):33-8.

doi:10.1016/j.artmed.2013.05.002.

<https://psnet.ahrq.gov/issue/physicians-responses-clinical-decision-support-intensive-care-unit-comparison-four-different>

---

How to tailor warnings within electronic health records to avert safety problems while avoiding alert fatigue is an ongoing question for medical informaticians. This study found that pop-up alerts appeared to be the most effective mechanism for presenting clinical decision support for drug prescribing.