

Examining the relationship among ambulatory surgical settings work environment, nurses' characteristics, and medication errors reporting.

January 27, 2016

Farag AA, Anthony MK. Examining the Relationship Among Ambulatory Surgical Settings Work Environment, Nurses' Characteristics, and Medication Errors Reporting. J Perianesth Nurs. 2015;30(6):492-503. doi:10.1016/j.jopan.2014.11.014.

<https://psnet.ahrq.gov/issue/examining-relationship-among-ambulatory-surgical-settings-work-environment-nurses>

This survey study of nurses across four ambulatory surgical wards in Ohio found that nursing managers' leadership styles and some aspects of the safety climate (such as teamwork and organizational learning) were associated with how willing nurses are to report medication errors.