

Do final-year medical students have sufficient prescribing competencies? A systematic literature review.

April 16, 2018

Brinkman DJ, Tichelaar J, Graaf S, et al. Do final-year medical students have sufficient prescribing competencies? A systematic literature review. Br J Clin Pharmacol. 2018;84(4):615-635.

doi:10.1111/bcp.13491.

<https://psnet.ahrq.gov/issue/do-final-year-medical-students-have-sufficient-prescribing-competencies-systematic-literature>

---

This literature review examined whether graduating medical students have achieved competence in safe medication prescribing. The included studies showed a lack of consensus about the standards for safe prescribing education in medical school and variation in prescribing skills and knowledge. The authors call for larger and more rigorous studies and clear educational standards to promote safer medication prescribing.