

Accuracy of emergency department clinical findings for diagnosis of coronavirus disease 2019.

July 29, 2020

Peyrony O, Marbeuf-Gueye C, Truong V, et al. Accuracy of emergency department clinical findings for diagnosis of coronavirus disease 2019. Ann Emerg Med. 2020;76(4):405-412.

doi:10.1016/j.annemergmed.2020.05.022.

<https://psnet.ahrq.gov/issue/accuracy-emergency-department-clinical-findings-diagnosis-coronavirus-disease-2019>

This prospective study enrolled all patients with suspected COVID-19 who were tested for SARS-CoV-2 in order to estimate the diagnostic accuracy of patients' characteristics and emergency physician judgement in predicting COVID-19. Findings indicate that physician clinical judgement was generally accurate and that certain patient characteristics (loss of smell, lung ultrasound findings) increase the likelihood of identifying COVID-19.