

Conducting safety research safely: a policy-based approach for conducting research with peer review protected material.

January 13, 2021

Myers LC, Blumenthal K, Phadke NA, et al. Conducting Safety Research Safely: A Policy-Based Approach for Conducting Research with Peer Review Protected Material. Jt Comm J Qual Patient Saf. 2021;47(1):54-59. doi:10.1016/j.jcjq.2020.09.008.

<https://psnet.ahrq.gov/issue/conducting-safety-research-safely-policy-based-approach-conducting-research-peer-review>

Learning from adverse events is a core component of patient safety improvement. These authors developed guidance for the use of peer review protected information (such as voluntary event reports and root causes analyses) in safety research. The guidance aims to ensure that data are handled safely and appropriately while supporting scientific discovery.