

Use of simulation to measure the effects of just-in-time information to prevent nursing medication errors: a randomized controlled study.

January 27, 2021

Berg TA, Hebert SH, Chyka D, et al. Use of Simulation to Measure the Effects of Just-in-Time Information to Prevent Nursing Medication Errors. Simul Healthc. 2021;16(6):e136-e141.

doi:10.1097/sih.0000000000000529.

<https://psnet.ahrq.gov/issue/use-simulation-measure-effects-just-time-information-prevent-nursing-medication-errors>

Nurses are often responsible for medication administration at the bedside. This simulation study found that a smart phone app providing just-in-time medication administration information could reduce the occurrence of medication administration errors by nursing students.