

First do no harm: practitioners' ability to 'diagnose' system weaknesses and improve safety is a critical initial step in improving care quality.

March 3, 2021

English M, Ogola M, Aluvaala J, et al. First do no harm: practitioners' ability to 'diagnose' system weaknesses and improve safety is a critical initial step in improving care quality. Arch Dis Child. 2021;106(4):326-332. doi:10.1136/archdischild-2020-320630.

<https://psnet.ahrq.gov/issue/first-do-no-harm-practitioners-ability-diagnose-system-weaknesses-and-improve-safety-critical>

---

Health systems are encouraged to proactively identify patient safety risks. In the first of a two-part series, the authors draw on the Systems Engineering Initiative for Patient Safety (SEIPS framework) to discuss the strengths and challenge of a low-resource newborn unit from a systems perspective and SEIPS' implications for patient safety.