

Program access, depressive symptoms, and medical errors among resident physicians with disability.

January 12, 2022

Meeks LM, Pereira-Lima K, Frank E, et al. Program access, depressive symptoms, and medical errors among resident physicians with disability. JAMA Netw Open. 2021;4(12):e2141511.

doi:10.1001/jamanetworkopen.2021.41511.

<https://psnet.ahrq.gov/issue/program-access-depressive-symptoms-and-medical-errors-among-resident-physicians-disability>

This survey estimates the prevalence of disability among medical residents to be 7.5%. Findings suggest an association between lack of accessibility through accommodations and increased risk for depression and self-reported medical errors during training.