

Organizational factors that promote error reporting in healthcare: a scoping review.

September 14, 2022

Wawersik D, Palaganas J. Organizational factors that promote error reporting in healthcare: a scoping review. J Healthc Manag. 2022;67(4):283-301. doi:10.1097/jhm-d-21-00166.

<https://psnet.ahrq.gov/issue/organizational-factors-promote-error-reporting-healthcare-scoping-review>

Organizational cultures encouraging psychological safety can increase safe healthcare practices such as error reporting. This narrative review identified several organizational factors that promote psychological safety and error reporting (e.g., leadership support, nonpunitive and fair blame cultures, and continuous improvement processes) as well as organizational factors that serve as barriers to reporting (e.g., blame culture, poor communication, burnout, leadership resistance to change).